

Challenge 2: Compulsion to use

Social media is designed to make users want to be there as much as possible. Some participants felt fear of missing out if they didn't connect often.

Others felt obliged to follow up on comments and to check in on people very often, worrying that neurotypical contacts would consider them rude if they don't comply with these expectations.